They cancelled our reservations!

posted 22 hours ago by Beaverstatemilitia 🗣️ +2070 / -1

What the hell is going on in this country we had reservations at the Hyatt Regency right by the capital for the fifth through the seventh they canceled our reservations last night at 1:30 in the morning. So I got a hold of them today and they said they were shut down completely. I mean what the fuck is going on. Anyone else had there's canceled? Now what the hell am I supposed to do with plane tickets and no place to stay.

Don't stay in DC. Stay close enough outside it so you can come in.

Either that or bring campers and tents to fill it up so they can't block you out on the 6th.

Could create a guard system where campers surround tents for security etc.

Just don't rely on DC hotels

Eastern edge of West Virginia is under a 2 hour drive from DC. You can stay out of Virginia and Maryland that way.

DE is only a hr and 45 min drive from central de to dc. Plenty of rooms at dover downs and they are nice! I hope you can find something closer, but they will probably start shutting down all hotels near dc from the 5th to the 7th just as a big FU to us, but at least they did it now and not the day of check in early in the morning, be prepared for a lot of fuckery. But they can't stop what's coming!

Bathrooms are necessary. I am NOT kidding. Sanitation is a HUGE issue.

If anyone is organizing this they need to reach out to companies with port-o-potties and see if there are any patriots willing to truck them in.

metro will be running regular schedule as Federal Employees have to get to work in DC, unless Trump gives them the day off. I highly doubt that. You can fly into BWI, take Amtrak or other trains into DC, also you can fly into Dulles; 50 miles from the Swamp in DC. NEVER GIVE IN, Find other ways... YOU CAN FIND ALL INFORMATION VIA search tools. If you want any other suggestions, email me; [\[email protected\]](#) I was born & raised in the MDV area. I lived in Northern VA for 10 plus years, was raised 15 miles east of DC in Maryland.

– dancn 11 points 21 hours ago +12 / -1

It was also a real question... i mean there must be some groups that have volunteers that could be calling hotels and identifying ones that are not going to fuck people last second. Maybe coordinating safe ride shares to get to DC.. safe places to park that are protected.. etc. People need to know they need to travel in groups, not to branch off on their own. ANTIFA will be out hunting down lone and confused patriots i can guarantee it. They will target hotels, they will target subways. If we are even remotely coordinated nothing they do will make even the slightest difference.

I've said from the start: EVERYTHING in DC is going to be closed on January 6. EVERYTHING. If you are going, you'd better plan on driving and camping and sleeping in your vehicle. Bring all food and supplies.

100% chance flights to DC will be canceled and subways / trains halted.

by all means, go, but realize YOU ARE ON YOUR OWN people are not yet realizing this was absolutely a COUP, and this is WAR against the people, they will do everything. They might even shut down the airport because of covid. That was the plan. Steal it all, and shut it all down, and use law enforcement to do it. It was a very evil plan and they are getting away with it.

From the dc metro area. The mayor made an announcement Friday or Saturday that all restaurants & bars were to go on full lockdown for the next three weeks. It's likely that they will try to shut the whole city down, metro included. If you stay in northern Virginia, you can walk to downtown DC even if the metro gets closed. Not sure what they can do if people start camping on the national mall... it should be federal property not DC property.

I went back and forth o flying vs. driving. Cheap flights vs. long drive meant about the same overall $, but I'm pretending to work on Tues and Thurs so I decided to save the time and fly. My hotel is in VA close to Reagan National, the subway entrance, and the crossing over Potomac. I think being NoVA they won't cancel my room. I've got three methods planned to get into DC.

If they cancel flights, I will get in my truck and get there regardless, it will just take a lot longer.
